Dear Mr. Rosenthal:

It has been an unforgettable week-end. I can never put into words my feelings after having left your studio. You have crystallized in imperishable metal the spiritual values of our people's life - religious, secular and humorous. Again I greet you as "Rabbi" Rosenthal, for your work interprets the psyche of our people far better than a rabbi's preaching. If only these could be brought to the attention of Jews not only as the works of art which they are, but as expressions of our people's genius as truly as any literary portion of our tradition. I am greatly your debtor not only for the privilege of having seen what you have done, but for the interpretations you so generously gave.

I was deeply moved by the figure of Isaiah. Will you please make one for me in bronze at your earliest opportunity? I have a place for it on my shelf of Biblical books.

Thank you for the invitation to come down to your studio again. I hope to avail myself of it at the earliest opportunity.

Sincerely yours,

Morris Lieberman
